

Sunday Mercury

6
to view

LIVING ABROAD

ALMOST 260,000 Britons now own a home abroad, while a third of the rest of us wish we could.

And research shows as many as half of over-50s would prefer living in another country.

High taxes and long working hours are cited as prime reasons for wanting to pack up and head for a country where we believe that the grass must be greener.

But add the incentive of investing in let-able property as a pension asset and it's easy to see why crowds will be flocking to foreign property exhibitions during Place In the Sun Live at Birmingham NEC, from September 29 to October 1.

Publication: Sunday Mercury
Subject: Living abroad
Circulation: 69,375
Date: September 24, 2006
Source: Coverage arranged by Wide PR

Location: Baosici Village
Apartments, Kotor, Montenegro.

Price: £94,040 to £105,642.

Accommodation: Selection of two bedroom, two bathroom apartments, built to western standards, with balcony and sea view.

Points of Interest: The location is below mountains overlooking Kotor Bay, 100m walk from the front and with good transport links – and would fetch stratospheric prices outside this balmy Balkan state.

For details: Visit website
plutodevelopments.com

